STOPPING CORNELL WILL BE COLUMBIA'S TOUGHEST JOB

ITHACANS' MIGHTY MACHINE MAY ROLL UP BIG SCORE

Remarkable Record.

By William Abbott.

Cornell's high-power machine will sub squarely over Columbia on the Polo Grounds Saturday, unless the local eleven improves decidedly on its past showing. Cornell's feat of solling up great scores has been one of several notable features on Eastern gridrons this senson. First, the lithacans swamp the Western Russerves 110 to 0 in a so-minute contest. No matter how weak the opposition, this is a remarkable scoring accomplishment. Then the Big lag accomplishment. Then the Big Red team defeats Dartmouth, 59 to backfield men are clever basketball players. Basketball knowledge is a big aid in the manipulation of football passes.

A decisive defeat is generally attributed to the collapse of a team, but no eleven ever breaks down unless it is forced to by its opponents. Against Dartmouth the Big Red team turned loose a smooth, powerful attack, a typical Dobic offense that scores in many different ways. This is the kind of machine Columbia will endeavor to stop on the Polo Grounds. The size of the indertaking can be quickly understood when it is recalled that Dartmouth, before being overwhelmed by Cornell, won from Columbia, 31 to 7.

Cornell invades this section at a time when Columbia is not prepared to take a strong stand. This week Buck O'Neill has worked overture attempt.

Becores made by Yale have been very impressive, but close observers at New Haven would be better eatisfied if the Buildog's schedule had included more games like the one with West Point. Best way to develop a strong feam is to feed it tough opposition. Cream puff schedules don't often produce powerful teams.

Tierney, Harvard's right tackle, will wear a special protecting mask and hood for the Princeton battle. He sustained a neck injury, but was so valuable to the Crimson squad that a special harness was rigged up for him.

Jack Cleave will start at fullback take a strong stand. This week Buck

O'Neill has worked overtime attempting to fill places caused by injuries.
The lose of Frank Brodil, star end and centre, was a hard break of luck. Ralph Forsyth also went on the hospital list, which meant another hole to plug up.
John Klenninger, Captain of the 1920 eleven, has been working out in Forsyth's place, while Leo Johnson, a veteran, took Brodil's position. The Blue and White team went a long session yesterday afternoon to tune in for the Cornell tussie. Even during the rain Tuesday Coach O'Neill had his charges out during a strenuous practice. The Morningside squad has good material this season, but the Cornell Eleven That Invades team's showing has been strangely disappointing. The home team may suddenly find itself and put up a creditable game against Cornell.
